My principal professional teaching interests and academic research lie in the field of mainstream and social media, mass communication, as well as linguistics. I usually focus on conflicts, wars and ‘hot’ contemporary politics, e.g. terrorism, security, radicalization, in their relation to the Middle East and beyond. My professional teaching competences and research experiences, attained during my postdoctoral research, PhD and MA, in various Arab, European and British environments, have allowed me to develop new models and tools in teaching, as well as in investigating mass communication/media, social media, digital discourses in the Middle East and beyond.
